The Librarian:

Dear Sir:

If and when you need material for your library we would suggest that you use this service, and we believe that you will find it more efficient than any other method of obtaining your desiderata.

We have been engaged as specialists in this acquisition of publications for some years, especially for those produced in Latin America. Among our clients are the Library of Congress, the League of Nations Library, the Huntington Library and Art Gallery, the University of Maine Library, the Cleveland Public Library, the Ohio State University and many others. Most of these depend on this service for all their acquisitions.

We are prepared to supply you with single titles or your entire list of desiderata, whatever the nature of the publication, the time and place of its publication, and whether current or out of print. We purchase through agents abroad and in all countries of Latin America, with whom we have had continuous dealings for years, these including all the important booksellers of both current and out of print publications in their respective countries. They ship promptly on receipt of our orders and make a search for the material not at the time available, and also keep us informed of all new material published, whether issued by private, cultural or government organizations.

As part of our equipment we have here, many thousands of titles classified under country and subject with data on the price and the book-sellers from whom they may be obtained, which have been built up from information furnished by our agents and which is constantly being added to and corrected, as to accuracy, and by this means, and the established working arrangements we have with our agents, we are able to order the publications desired from the sources known to have them, or best equipped to obtain them, and obtain them as quickly and cheaply as possible. We can also in most cases, report promptly to our clients approximate prices of material desired where they require this information before placing definite orders. From the same equipment we will be glad to be of any possible help in the formation of lists and titles on any subject or country in which you may be interested.

Very truly yours,

A. John Eveland, Manager

Gentlemen:

Your circular letter of May 19th is at hand.
As the testing of the service which you offer may I ask whether you have on hand a copy of Medina's "Medalas Chilenas"? This is not an order but merely an inquiry.
It might develop into an order, if the correspondent who has offered a copy of this publication should decide his not being able to send it. Awaiting your response.

Very truly,

SN:JG
